The parable of the royal banquet is a parable about the Kingdom of God and about the people who will eventually belong to it. It is also the first of three parables that challenge the legitimacy of the leadership. The parables all contrast the true Israel with the attitudes and lives of the Pharisees, demonstrating the claims of the Pharisees as false. In addition, the Parable of the Royal Banquet and the Wedding Garment is Jesus' interpretation of the History of Salvation. It is also one of the three parables of judgment or "rejection parables" that Jesus told in the Temple of Jerusalem during the last week of his public life, addressing the "chief priests and elders of the people", i.e., their religious and civic leaders. Jesus told this parable on his last visit to the Temple on what we know as the Tuesday of Holy Week. The encounter was part of the Master's last confrontation with those who saw Jesus as their enemy, before they had him arrested. The actual parable is the disturbing story of a King who celebrated the wedding feast of His Son. When the VIP guests who had been invited refused to come, He brought street people in to take their places. Here, Jesus combines the parable of the marriage feast with another rabbinic parable, the parable of the wedding garment.
